1. Introduction

Guru Gobind Singh Indraprastha University hosted the Vardaan International Film Festival (VIFF) 2026 at the East Delhi Campus on 26th and 27th February 2026. The prestigious event was graced by the Hon'ble Chief Minister of Delhi as the Chief Guest, along with eminent filmmakers, artists, social activists, academicians, and distinguished guests from across the country. Organized in collaboration with Dadhichi Deh Dan Samiti, the festival aimed to spread awareness regarding organ and body donation through impactful films, documentaries, and creative storytelling.

2. Objectives

The major objectives of the festival were:

- To create awareness about the importance of organ and body donation.
- To encourage people to understand the value of donating organs and saving lives.
- To promote social responsibility and humanitarian values through cinema.
- To provide a platform for filmmakers and artists to showcase films based on meaningful social themes.
- To use documentaries and creative storytelling as tools for spreading awareness and inspiring positive change.
- To encourage students and young individuals to participate in social causes and contribute towards building a compassionate society.

3. Event Description

The Vardaan International Film Festival 2026 was organised with great enthusiasm at the East Delhi Campus of GGSIPU. The two-day festival brought together renowned filmmakers, artists, social activists, academicians, students, and other distinguished personalities to celebrate cinema as a medium of social awareness and transformation.

The festival featured the screening of various impactful films and documentaries focusing on organ donation, body donation, humanity, compassion, and social responsibility. These films highlighted the importance of organ donation in saving lives and encouraged audiences to overcome misconceptions and understand the significance of this noble cause.

The presence of eminent personalities and distinguished guests added value to the event. Interactive discussions and exchanges of ideas provided opportunities for participants to understand the social impact of cinema and its ability to influence public thinking. The festival also encouraged aspiring filmmakers and students to use creative storytelling to address important social issues.

Overall, the event served as an engaging platform for learning, awareness, and meaningful discussions, reinforcing the message that cinema can play a significant role in bringing positive change to society.

4. Conclusion

The Vardaan International Film Festival 2026 was an informative and meaningful event that successfully highlighted the importance of organ and body donation through the medium of cinema. It provided students and participants with valuable insights into humanitarian values, social responsibility, and the power of creative storytelling. The festival encouraged individuals to become more aware, compassionate, and socially responsible citizens. Overall, the event was a significant initiative towards promoting awareness about organ and body donation and inspiring people to contribute towards saving lives and serving humanity.
